About CDP Score Report

Responding organizations are assessed and scored across four consecutive levels which are Disclosure, Awareness, Management and Leadership. The minimum requirements must be met at one scoring level before a responder can be given credit for the next scoring level.

The sector-specific questions allocated to organizations are defined by CDP's Activity Classification System (CDP-ACS). This system categorizes organizations by focusing on the activities from which they derive revenue and associating these with potential environmental effects. This report provides the benchmark of your score against the average of the activity group.

Your 2024 CDP Score Report allows you to better understand your score, compare against industry and global averages, and visually indicate which categories may require further attention.
